

THE ASIAN CONTEST OF
ARCHITECTURAL ROOKIE'S AWARD

THE 5TH ASIAN CONTEST OF ARCHITECTURAL ROOKIES AWARD

Organizer: National University of Singapore, ACARA

The objective of the Asian contest of the Architectural Rookie's Award is to review, judge, and evaluate architectural works and ideas created by students studying architectural designs in universities in Asia. As architecture is primarily based on cultures, this contest offers a great opportunity for students to mutually understand and share different cultures through their respective architectural styles. Having such an opportunity will also contribute to students' education by exposing them to the cultural diversity in Asia.

We all hope that the Asian Contest of the Architectural Rookie's Award can be a place where talented students and committee members gather, discuss and evaluate works, and consider architectural education and modern architecture in Asia. Through this contest, it is greatly expected that participating students will actively take part in architectural culture and modern architecture in Asia and then be successful in driving architecture globally.

The contest will be held on April 21-23, 2017 at the Department of Architecture School of Design and Environment, National University of Singapore and National Design Centre.
